

Serving the Northwest for over 50 years.

Announcement

To: All FWAA Members and Associates

From: James F. Fitzgerald, Executive Director

A blue ink signature of James F. Fitzgerald, written over the name in the 'From:' field.

Subject: Free Copy of 'Advances in Dryland Farming' Book Available – Act Now!

Date: April 11, 2017

Washington State University, a valued partner to Far West, is offering a free copy of the upcoming book 'Advances in Dryland Farming in the Inland Pacific Northwest' to our members who request it on a first come, first serve basis. The book will also be available electronically for free download around late summer. To receive a physical copy of this book please respond to Brooke Saari at brooke.saari@wsu.edu with the following information by April 18, 2017:

Contact Name:

Organization (if applicable):

Mailing Address:

"This publication is focused on sustainable cereal production into the future (within the dryland region of the inland Pacific Northwest). It synthesizes recent research advances as well as economic and other practical considerations for grower decision-making support. Packed with tools, resources, and the most current research, the book supports farmers as they make decisions relating to productivity, resilience, and their bottom lines."